RESPONSE TO ACHILLE

by David Shusterman

David Shusterman's Response to Achille is a large-scale work that explores the relationship between the artist's work and the work of the philosopher Achille Mbembe. The work is a response to Mbembe's book On Postcolonial Reason, which explores the relationship between the artist's work and the work of the philosopher Achille Mbembe. January 2002, the design of the Seagull Books stand for the Calcutta Book Fair. In keeping with our tradition of 'responding' to events that affect our world, the façade reflected the 'self-censorship' on the Internet into which a large part of the world had stepped.

This photograph, taken by a photographer whose name sadly I no longer remember, shows Tom Lai's powerful design that converts the façade into a black bunker, with a fresco of life-size figures created out of the same clay that Kumartuli's artisans use to sculpt the gods and goddesses, year after year. These figures ageless, genderless and ultimately faceless, united only by their various stages of suffering and captivity.

Later that year, I re-used these same figures to create an installed body of work, adding light, smoke and projections, and called it 'In a Cannibal Time'.

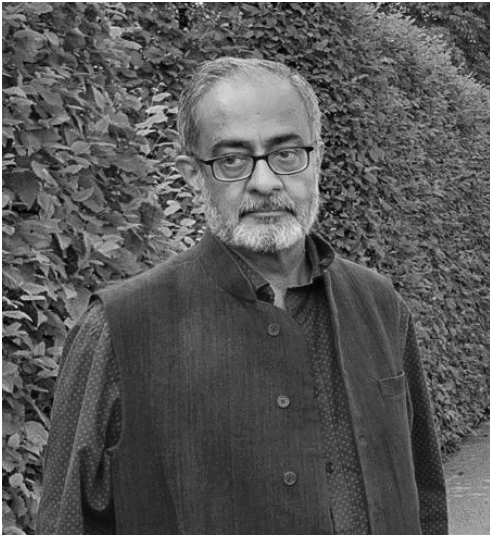

How close do you get to your 'subject'? To observe. To keep a distance. To create without being in the 'thick of it'. To document. To be moved in a manner that invites anger. Shame. Horror. Paralysis. To capture 'despair' on film. To select frame after frame of anguish. Then print it on paper. Install it in an art space. Invite others to see. To feel. To remember.

~ Naveen Kishore

NAVEEN KISHORE (B. 1953)

Kishore's eye is informed by his deep engagement with theatre photography, a genre he has been practicing since beginning to work in theatre production in the early 1970s. He has extensively documented female impersonators from Manipuri, Bengali and Punjabi theatre practices. His interest in street photography comprises the second main thread of his oeuvre.

Naveen Kishore established Seagull Books in 1982, a publishing program in the arts and media focusing on drama, film, art and culture studies. Today, it also publishes literature, including poetry, serious fiction and non-fiction. In 1987, Kishore set up the Seagull Foundation for the Arts as a non-profit charitable trust. The Seagull School of Publishing was set up under the auspices of the Trust in 2012.
